VELOCIPEDES IN NEW YORK.

A New Yorker was seen with a ington place on Tuesday afternoon.-His performance attracted a large crowd of interested spectators. The cept w Nicholson pavement was favorable to pies! his efforts, and his skill was seen to great advantage. He rode a French velocipede, with a driving wheel of out." He has tried every thing else, about three feet two inches, and rode it like a master. His slow movement was excellent, without unsteadiness or wabbling, and when he let himself out he went with the speed of an arrow. In Paris it is no uncommon thing to see such a vehicle darting hither and thither slong the crowded street, but in New York it was a novelty. And yet the velocipede is no novelty. It was invented sixty years age. Its propelling power was then, as now, the feet of the rider, except that he put them on the ground and present form was devised in 1830 by M.
